Hidden pain

A fisherman carries a shark at a market in Lombok, Indonesia, one of the largest exporters of shark fin to China. An estimated 100 million sharks are killed each year to satisfy global demand for shark fin, much of which is consumed as shark fin soup in Asian countries.

PAUL HILTON

A sick pig left to die on the floor of a farm corridor in Finland. After chickens, pigs are the most popular land animal we eat, with approximately 1.5 billion slaughtered every year for food. That number does not include the hundreds of millions that have been killed in China alone following the first recorded outbreak of African Swine Fever there in 2018.

KRISTO MUURIMAA
Tim the brown bear of the Gran Circo Holiday circus poses for a photo with children in Spain.
AITOR GARMENDIA

Steel barriers, concrete floors, tiled walls and push-button technology make up the habitat of the modern-day dairy herd, Poland.
ANDREW SKOWRON

A caged fox on a fur farm in Poland, the world's third largest fur producer. The country recently voted to ban fur farming from 2021.
ANDREW SKOWRON

A macaque performs in a popular street show in Jakarta, known locally as Topeng Monyet (Mask Monkey). Indonesia. JOAN DE LA MALLA
Who’s next? At this dog slaughterhouse, a butcher chooses the dog he will beat to death with an iron bar while the other dogs look on. China. JOSE VALLE

Inglorious death. In the horse yard of the bullring in Azpeitia, a bull is hung by his hind leg to bleed out before being butchered at the local meat works. Spain. AITOR GARMENDIA

HIDDEN: Animals in the Anthropocene, by JoAnne McArthur & Keith Wilson, is available to buy now: https://weanimalsmedia.org/our-work/hidden/